Figure 1 consists of two side-by-side scatter plots. The left plot is titled '1990 Census' and the right plot is titled '2000 Census'. Both plots have 'Number of children in household' on the y-axis and 'Number of children in neighborhood' on the x-axis. The y-axis for both plots ranges from 0 to 10, and the x-axis for both plots ranges from 0 to 10. Each plot contains a scatter of data points, a solid regression line, and a shaded area representing the confidence interval. The regression lines in both plots show a positive correlation, with the 2000 Census line being steeper than the 1990 Census line.

The map shows the northern Adriatic coastline from Trieste in the north to the Gulf of Genoa in the south. Sampling stations are indicated by black dots and numbered 1 to 15. Station 1 is near Trieste, and station 15 is near the Gulf of Genoa. The map includes latitude coordinates (44° 30' N to 45° 30' N) and longitude coordinates (12° 30' E to 13° 30' E).

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was plotted against the number of trials for each condition. The error bars represent the standard error of the mean. The number of correct responses increased with the number of trials for all conditions. The number of correct responses was significantly higher for the 10 trials condition than for the 5 trials condition ($p < 0.05$).

This image is a dense, abstract pattern composed of numerous small, black and white geometric shapes. The shapes are primarily triangles of various sizes and orientations, interspersed with small circles and lines. The arrangement is complex and non-repeating, creating a textured, almost crystalline appearance. The overall effect is one of intricate detail and visual complexity.

Article 76

Figure 1 is a line graph showing the percentage of respondents who believe that the U.S. should take action to reduce global warming, broken down by age group (18-29, 30-49, 50-69, 70+) and education level (High School, College, Graduate). The Y-axis ranges from 0 to 100. The X-axis lists the age groups and education levels. The legend indicates that solid lines represent 'U.S. should take action' and dashed lines represent 'U.S. should not take action'. The graph shows that for all age groups, the percentage of respondents who believe the U.S. should take action increases with higher education levels. For the 18-29 age group, the percentage is approximately 85% for High School, 90% for College, and 95% for Graduate. For the 30-49 age group, it is approximately 75% for High School, 85% for College, and 90% for Graduate. For the 50-69 age group, it is approximately 65% for High School, 75% for College, and 85% for Graduate. For the 70+ age group, it is approximately 55% for High School, 65% for College, and 75% for Graduate.

- X-axis: Labeled "Number of children in the household", ranging from 0 to 10.
- Y-axis: Labeled "Number of children in the neighborhood", ranging from 0 to 10.
- Identity Line: A solid diagonal line from (0,0) to (10,10).
- Other Line: A dashed diagonal line from (0,0) to (5,10), representing $y=2x$.
- Data Points: Approximately 25 black dots are plotted. Most points lie below the identity line, suggesting that the number of children in the neighborhood is typically smaller than the number in the household. Some points are located above the identity line, especially for household sizes of 6 or more.

The Agrobacterium strains were grown in the YEA medium for 24 h at 28°C. The cell concentration of the strains was adjusted to 10⁸ cells/ml. The cell suspension was mixed with the plant tissue and incubated for 24 h at 28°C. The plant tissue was then cultured on the selective medium. The transformation efficiency was determined as the number of transformants per 100 mg of plant tissue. The data are the mean values of three independent experiments.

CHAPTER 20 NOTICE

Article 240

A black and white photograph showing a large, dense crowd of people, primarily men, gathered in an open field. The individuals are dressed in formal or semi-formal attire, including hats, coats, and suits, which suggests a significant event or a formal assembly. The crowd is distributed across the entire frame, with some people standing closer to the camera and others further away, creating a sense of depth. The overall composition emphasizes the scale and density of the gathering.
